FOOTBALL STUDENTS WATCH COLUMBIA UNDER COACH MORLEY. BURKETT THE MAN

Coaching of the Year's 'Varsity Eleven Will Be Compared with Past Work of the Professional Sanford.

The followers of the Columbia eleven watched Wednesday's game with Fordham with special interest for several reasons, the main one being the fact of work Morley was capable of as a coachers for a year himself, but the feeling in the college that was strong professional coaches in the country, was that he will be given the most enthusiastic support by the whole school, something Sanford, with all his success season's team, cannot be called a professional coach by any means. He is entirely independent of a coacher's salary and is keeping in the game entirely see by looking at him that he depends upon strength more than crafty playing prepared for the gridiron under his hands will certainly know what it means to give and take a good beating in any sort of a game.

to overcome, but the student body expect him to make this season's team the game the players gave every indication of being as good as any the university

Morley is fortunate in having as cantain under him Weekes, who is without a doubt the best man Columbia has ever tain under him Weekes, who is without a doubt the best man Columbia has ever had. Weekes is a player of the same buildog style as Morley, and there is not a better ground gainer in the country to-day than he. In Wednesday's game Weekes showed that he was in perfect shape, and the ease with which he made his way through the best of the Fordham players would indicate that he has lost none of his ability of past seasons. Upon Weekes will fall the task of winning the hard games ahead of the Columbia eleven and his sensational runs of last year will likely be repeated when the boys on the hill line up with the topnotchers.

Finish Contest Between Handler and Guider Postponed and

There are about fifty disappointed sporty clubmen in New York to-day. They paid $10 each to witness a finish fight between Jimmy Handler, the Newark middle-weight, and Jimmy Guider, the loft of a newly-finished building close to the Hariem River. Shortly before 10 o'clock the clubmen arrived at the battle ground, but before they could enter the building they were quietly tipped off by the promoter that the ''cops' were on and that the fight would not take place. They were all assured that the battle would take place some night next week, and without a murmur, they separated, declaring that the procought to pay more attention to other things than a little friendly scrap between two pusibles. tween two pugilists.

M'GRAW IS AFTER.

St. Louis Outfielder Says He Will Be a Giant Next Season if the Financial Inducement Is Big Enough.

McGraw is still busy looking for players, and equally as busy keeping quiet about what he has done in the looking line. It is certain, however, that the close-mouthed manager of the New Yorks is making an effort to sign Jesse Burkett, the hard-hitting St. Louisan, who would be a valuable man for next season's reorganized Glants. Negotiations have gone so far that Burkett will leave for New York within a day or two to talk the matter over with McGraw and it is highly probably that the two will come to terms.

"It is a question of money with me," says Burkett, "and, while I like St. Louisans and St Louis, I would be glad to play with New York if McGraw can figure that I am worth as much to him as I think I am worth. I have not yet signed a contract for 1903 with St. Louis, or with any other team, and will not do so until I see McGraw and other managers who may be willing to pay me more money. It may be two weeks or more money. It may be two weeks or more before I will know where I am going to play, but it will be wherever I can get the biggest pay. I will, of course, give Mr. Hedges. of St. Louis, a chance to meet any raise that McGraw may offer me."

It is hard to see, under these circumstances, why Burkett should not be gobbled up at once by McGraw, who has frequently declared of late that money is no object where the securing of star players is concerned. It is probable that Burkett is the man McGraw has been after for the "one position yet open" on the team. If so the Glants should be complete in a very few days.

FOOTBALL EXPERTS IN RELAY CONTEST

Gaelle Players in Interstate Match to Run in Celtic Park.

One of the athletic features to be held n conjunction with the Interstate championship football match at Celtic Park on Sunday next will be a relay race in which every man of five teams in the vicinity will compete. The spectacle of seventy-five men who are candidates for the Keane and Dunn trophies arrayed in a race of this kind is a distinct novelty in competitive circles. The football contest will be the deciding one between the O'Connells, of New York, and the Young Irelands, o Worcester, Mass. Each team has a victory to its credit, and speculation regarding the outcome is pretty evenly divided.
